Exiles with a Mission

Matthew 28:18-20

Stuart McCray, Associate Pastor

February 6, 2022

King Jesus provides us 3 truths about the disciple-making commission that he gives to all exiles.

There's a claim (v.18), a command (v.19-20a), and a commitment (v.20b), but without the claim and commitment, the command carries no weight and no power to obey it. So, we'll cover the claim and commitment first, then address the command.

A Claim – Verse 18

Jesus' claim of universal authority is the basis of the command in verse 19. That's what "therefore" means in "Go therefore and make disciples". It speaks to result, cause and effect.

Jesus says, "I have universal authority, so as a result, make disciples—followers of me."

A Commitment – Verse 20b

The sending of the Holy Spirit to empower his disciples, is the fulfillment of the commitment, "I am with you always".

The very One who has all authority in heaven and on earth, doesn't just rightly command you to "make disciples", he also commits to being with you always, to empower you to obedience.

Nothing we face will be bigger than the empowering promise of Jesus' abiding presence.

Evangelism and conversion are implicit in making disciples, but to make a disciple (and not just a "decision") is to baptize them and teach them, in an ongoing way to obey all of Jesus' commands.

"Baptizing" and "teaching" make it clear that making disciples moves people into the kind of discipleship that occurs in the community of local churches.

A Command – Verses 19-20a

"Make disciples" is the command; this is the great commission. And it's given to every disciple of Jesus.
